OUR LONDON LETTER.

The Appointment of Lord Zetland to the Lord Lieutenantship of Ireland.

The Late French Elections—Uselessness of Big Guns—C. P. R. Shares.

From our own Correspondent.

London, Sept. 26, 1889.—There is a very definite rumor that the Duke of Connaught will return from India next spring by way of Japan and either via San Francisco to Vancouver, or else to the terminal city direct. He will traverse the continent by the Canadian Pacific Railway. The latter circumstance is significant. This line of rail is undoubtedly very important from a military point of view; and the Duke is formally to inspect it. But this visit of inspection is taken to indicate two things, first that the government are awaking to the

of the Canadian west shore, and secondly that the Queen is anxious that her son should take her cousin's place, and become commander-in-chief in the very near future.

Sir Edwin Arnold has been sending home to the Daily Telegraph—of which paper he has been editor for some years—full and glowing accounts of his visit to Canada. He has a for almost everything Canadian, and seems to have enjoyed the ocean trip immensely. He was a passenger by the Dominion liner R. M. S. Vancouver. Of all the Canadian towns, Toronto seems to have struck him most; and he tells us in his paper every day, how much in point of electric appliances Londoners are behind Torontonians.

The appointment of Lord Zetland to the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the place of the Marquis of Londonderry is not looked upon with feelings of unmixed satisfaction in the Emerald Isle. Of course Lord Zetland is in every way a most worthy young nobleman. He has never done anything yet, and although he has more ability than his predecessor in the vice-regal office, he is still far below the average in intellectual capacity of the men generally called upon to fill positions of much honor and no little responsibility. He is also much poorer than the outgoing lord-lieutenant; and the change from a viceroy who spent money freely to another who will be bound to keep his purse-strings tightly drawn is not likely to add fresh popularity to an office that the nationalists detest. Lord Zetland is fully alive to this fact himself; and though to so young a man this offer of high office must be an alluring bait, still we do not imagine he is likely to stay long at the vice-regal lodge. Who his successor would be in event of his retirement is difficult to forecast; but it is rumored among the knowing ones that Lord Salisbury will offer it to a well-known Unionist peer. For ourselves, we cannot see why should not, at all events, get an offer of the post. The vice-regal office would be the very one best suited to the impossible Randolph, and would certainly delight his American wife. Randolph would revel in the paltry dignity of lord-lieutenant, and could play at brag king, and sir his Tory democracy to the top of his bent in Dublin, while, apart from her beauty, wit, elegance and general charm of manner, the fact of her Yankee birth would endear Lady Randolph to the Hibernians. Randolph aspires to be a little Bonaparte, and he strongly objects to being snubbed every now and then in London—or in other words, stumbling across a Wellington, whenever he seeks to soar. The main objection is that he would be even in a worse position than Lord Zetland in the matter of cash; and unless his sister-in-law should consent to subsidize him freely, the difficulty, we fear, is insuperable.

THE FRENCH ELECTIONS.

So far the results of the French elections are decidedly in favor of the Republic. And it is not without a general feeling of relief over all Western Europe that the news was received. The General himself was of course returned for the arrondissement of Montmartre for which he was standing. Many also of his influential followers have won their contests; but France as a rule has voted pretty solidly for the Republic; and the general European satisfaction at this result was evidenced in a rapid rise on all the Bourses. Further, it is considered that large numbers of the voters abstained from voting in the first instance till they should be able to see clearly which way the wind blew. If this surmise is correct, it may mean a gain of several thousands of votes for the Republic on the second balloting. In France, as elsewhere, there are sure to be plenty of people who will join the winning side.

C. P. R. SHARES.

Canadian Pacific Railway shares have exhibited up to the beginning of last week a strong upward tendency. In mid-August they were quoted at 60. In mid-September they were over 70. There has been a slight reaction during the last week, throwing them back to 68, but passing up the Strand this morning, we saw them quoted again at 70. There are a number of professional investment advisers, if we may coin the term, springing up in London; and almost without exception they foretold the rise. They founded their prophecy mainly on the fact that the new ocean steamers for Japan would soon be placed on the Vancouver-Yokohama route, and lead to a large diversion of freight and passenger traffic from San Francisco. There was also some talk of the 20-mile railway belt owned by the C. P. R. being bought up by settlers and others, thus leading to an extra extension of the receipts.

BIG GUNS.

The question of the advisability of the big 111-ton guns has received a striking commentary during the past week. The great Armstrong firm had undertaken the order for the manufacture of guns of this size for the Victoria, the Sanspariel, and the Beebow. The first named vessel is now ready for sea, and was only awaiting her guns to be immediately put in commission. The proving of the monster weapons was undertaken at Elswick, and they both collapsed under the test. With carriages, mountings and necessary machinery, they cost in all a quarter of a million dollars. Why such gigantic ordnance was thought necessary in the first instance is what everybody asks. It is conceded that a 50-ton gun will really do as much damage and further, a stream of projectiles from two or three quick-firing guns would put their larger brethren out of action in five minutes. They were ordered, of course, to surpass the big Italian guns in size. It is a pity we do not follow the Italians more closely in matters where they are clearly right, as, for instance, in the superiority of their engineering for raising H. M. S. Sultan.

A RICH YOUNG DUKE.

Once again we have Donovan to the front. This remarkable animal has followed up its victory at Doncaster by landing the Lancashire plate last Saturday. It is nice to be a duke. It is nicer still to be a young duke. Nicest of all to be a rich young duke. But we pass beyond the reach of superlatives in searching for a suitable description for the good fortune of a rich young duke who owns a horse that wins for him in one season over $500,000. People say that he has been still more lucky in his wife, who is an epitome of all the graces. He saw her first in Scotland getting into a railway carriage, inquired who she was, kept his ducal eye upon her, and in due time Miss Dallas-Yorke became Duchess of Portland. How strange that the matrimonial coup of the year should have resulted from a graceful entry into a Highland train!

We have seen comments in several newspapers upon the capture of a in the river Tay in Scotland. From the amount of talk the taking of this fish has evoked, we are forced to conclude that a forty pounder brought to gaff is a rarity in British home waters. It is a pity more is not known of the salmon-fishing round your island, where fish of this weight, in the spring season at all events, are of no very unusual occurrence. Considering the prices wealthy Englishmen pay for their rivers nowadays and the very indifferent return for their money in the way of sport, a little judicious advertising of our piscatorial advantages might not be thrown away.

Let us wind up with the latest joke from Oxford. The dons there are beginning—perhaps in deference to growth of public opinion—to show stray symptoms of favor for the temperance cause. The under graduates have always been debarred from the happy privilege of keeping a in their rooms. But of course it is not an unknown occurrence that this rule should be occasionally broken on the quiet. In fact, only last term an enterprising undergrad smuggled, with the aid of some of his fellow students, a fine barrel of Bass treble X into his pantry. Thereon for many days he and his friends fattened and battened. At length the secret oozed out, and the youth was hauled up before the college authorities. "Why did you introduce this beer into your room, young man?" they ask. "To strengthen me, sir." "Oh, to strengthen you. And do you find, pray, that you are stronger now than you were last week before you had the beer?" "Oh, yes, sir. In fact last week it took three of us to carry the barrel upstairs, and now, sir, I can lift it myself with ease."

ANOTHER LONDON SENSATION

One Peer and Five Untitled Men in Trouble.

London, Oct. 15.—Another and still more shocking case than that of the Earl of Galloway's has been unearthed in the West End. In this case one peer and five untitled men of fortune are concerned, and the number of young girl victims is ten. The peer, it is said, has left the country, and Inspector Abberline, of Scotland Yard, is now in Paris in connection with the case. It is thought that the alleged offenders may prefer voluntary exile to the risk of standing upon their trial.

Placerville, Cala., Oct. 16.—John Olsen and Wm. Drager, who with John Myers, on March 22, 1888, murdered John Lowell, an old farmer, and then stole the stock on his farm, were hanged here at seven o'clock this morning in the presence of only twenty men. Sheriff Anderson read the death warrant to the men at 6:30. Drager listened attentively and remarked when the reading was concluded, "That's all right." Olsen was very sick and seemed to be breaking down on the march to the scaffold. Drager walked erect and steadily. Two deputies were compelled to steady Olsen. Drager, in a clear voice made a speech from the scaffold in which he thanked the officers for their kindness to him. He said "that his time had come and he was ready to go. If he had any enemies he forgave them." Olsen asked pardon for all his offences and forgave his enemies. While the strap was being adjusted Drager scanned the knot that was to end his existence, and critically eyed the rope and beam. At seven o'clock the trap was sprung, Drager exclaiming, "Jesus, Joseph and Mary, into thy keeping I put my soul."

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 15—The delegates of the international American conference were to day entertained here by Erastus Wiman. At a banquet in the evening, Mr. Wiman, Prof. Goldwin Smith and others made brief speeches. Mr. Wiman said that commercial union on the North American continent as between Canada and the States was within the possibilities of the next five or ten years, and that purely by concurrent legislation of Ottawa and Washington. It might take longe to create a customs union so as to include all the nations represented by the delegates here present, but the movement on the north would gradually stimulate the movement towards the south by showing its practicability and enormous advantages.

THE ETERNAL CITY.

A Well Informed Opinion That the Pope Must Leave It.

New York, Oct. 16.—The Mail and Express' Paris cable says the views which are held by Frenchmen concerning the future of the papacy are specially important at this juncture, because there are many here who are capable of forming a clear and unbiased opinion, and who look upon the Italian situation from particularly close quarters, and with a more independent spirit than is possible in Germany, Spain or Italy. One of the most important opinions thus far expressed is that of Earnest Renan, who is an acute observer of current affairs of ecclesiastical interest. In an interview on this subject he said "he considered that the ultimate departure of the Pope from Rome is inevitable, but that the status quo will be maintained as long as possible." The reason he gives for the delay of the abandonment of the Eternal City is that the Cardinals concerning the possibility of electing a Frenchman to succeed Leo XIII. He expressed the opinion that the election of a French successor to the Papal chair in existing circumstances is out of the question.

MARITIME CONFERENCE.

Its First Meeting and Introduction to the President.

Washington, Oct. 16.—Delegates to the International Maritime Conference assembled at the State Department this morning. Secretary Blaine met the delegates in the diplomatic reception room about 11:30 and was introduced to the different delegations by the minister of the countries they represent. Blaine made a speech of welcome. The delegates then held a short meeting and elected Admiral S. K. Franklin, of the U S navy, president of the conference. A motion to adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow was then put and carried and the members then proceeded to the Executive Mansion and were received by the President in the east room. After the delegates had been presented to the President, the latter standing in the centre of the semicircle, he spoke a few informal words of welcome, expressing gratification that the conference had assembled under such pleasant auspices. He expressed deep personal interest in the results which might be anticipated, and he trusted, attained, by the conference, and hoped that the passage of seas be made as safe as has been made rapid. The President, in conclusion, said that the object for which the conference had assembled was one which would attract universal interest throughout the world, and its attainment would be warmly welcomed by all nations.

THE TEA TRADE.

The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce to Enquire Into It.

San Francisco, Oct. 15—At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held yesterday, a memorial to the delegates of the American Interstate congress, commending the Nicaragua canal to their favorable consideration, and asking them to bring the advantages of the canal to the notice of their respective governments, was adopted. A discussion then followed on the enormous transcontinental freights now charged on tea shipments, during which it was shown that the tea trade had gone away from this city by reason of these heavy rates. The Northern Pacific and Canadian Pacific are now getting the business. A committee of five was authorized to investigate the question of tea freights over the C. P. R., and by the Suez canal, and report to a special meeting. The chamber adopted the report of its trustees opposing the establishment of a Pacific coast chamber of commerce.

BATTLE WITH A SHARK.

Thrilling Experience of Mr. Potts at Esquimalt.

In addition to the item already published in THE TIMES concerning the killing of a shark in Constance Cove, Esquimalt, Mr. Potts furnishes the following:

About 6 o'clock on Friday morning I noticed that my duck had not taken to the water as usual, and looking to find the cause I saw a large fish swimming in the cove, close to the rocks. I ran down to the water's edge, but the monster took the alarm at my approach and swam out into the bay. About 10 o'clock the fish returned, and I then saw it was a big shark. I stood on the edge of a lighter, and as the fish swam up alongside, I threw an axe at it. The weapon struck it in the back and inflicted a deep cut. The pain of the wound caused the shark to spring almost out of the water. It splashed and struggled, and in its blind fury dashed onto the beach. I called to my wife to bring another axe, and ran round to where the huge fish was struggling. Before I could reach the spot, however, armed with another axe, the shark had got afloat again. I waded into the water, when the monster came straight at me, turning over on its back ready to seize me. I watched my opportunity, and as the fish came near enough, I drove the edge of the axe with my whole force into its head. The second blow caused the brute to retire in haste, and it swam out into the bay again; it soon returned, evidently with the intention of having another try at me. I had waded into the water waist deep, and planted firmly upon a flat rock, I awaited its approach. As the shark came near I again threw the axe, and again was lucky enough to inflict a deep wound, this time in its side. Instead of retreating this time, the monster turned over, opened its jaws, and came right for me. My wife had promptly supplied me with a third axe, and as the shark swam close up, I dealt blow after blow on its head, the keen blade sinking into the bone at every stroke. I sprang ashore, caught up a long boat hook, and getting a good hold on the shark, with my wife's assistance, I got the fish upon the beach, where I put an end to its life. After it was dead we measured it, and found it to be 12 feet long and 2 feet 6 inches across the middle. The body remained on the beach for several days, and was viewed by crowds of people. On opening it yesterday morning I found several salmon, a large fish hook and several stones in the stomach.

JUDGE SWAN IN TROUBLE.

His Fine Collection Damaged by a Fire—Not All Lost.

A Port Townsend dispatch says that a fire in the block where Judge J. G. Swan's offices are came very near destroying his extensive and valuable collections of scientific and historical research. His apartments were flooded by water, but fortunately his most valuable unpublished manuscripts were safely packed in tight drawers, and received no injury. His library, however, was badly damaged. It contained many rare and valuable works, such as the voyages of Mears, Portlock and Dixon, and Marchand's "Hearn's" Hudson Bay, a complete set of Smithsonian reports from 1807 to the present time, and some rare old works upon admiralty law.

His collection of Indian relics, obtained during researches to which he gave over thirty years of his life, were badly soaked. There were also large bales of files of various old periodicals containing valuable historical data of the Northwest, almost totally destroyed.

SEVENTY KILLED.

A Terrible Explosion in a Staffordshire Mine Kills Seventy People.

The King of Portugal Still Lives—Indignation Over Earl Galloway's Case.

London, Oct. 16.—An explosion occurred in the Bentilie colliery at Longton, Staffordshire, early this morning. Seventy men were in the pit at the time of the explosion. None, it is believed have survived. The pit is completely wrecked, and the search for the bodies is attended with great difficulty. A large force of men is engaged in clearing away the debris and endeavoring to reach the dead and dying miners.

Men engaged in searching for victims of the explosion have found 50 bodies of dead miners.

A CRY OF ALARM.

London, Oct. 15—The St. James Gazette to-day refers to the Washington Congress of American Republics, and sounds a cry of alarm to arouse the British government from its lethargy at the threat to British interests involved in the congress. It behooves England, says the Gazette, to protect her interests in South America, as it would be suicidal to quietly allow the South American nations to form a close commercial union with the United States. Such a union could only result in the exclusion of British manufactures to a very great extent from the markets which they now enjoy.

THE KING STILL LIVES.

Lisbon, Oct. 16.—The king of Portugal, who was yesterday believed to be dying, passed a comfortable night with the fever somewhat abated.

Each of the accused furnished bail in $2,500.

EARL GALLOWAY'S CASE.

London, Oct. 14.—The scene in the court room at Dumfries on Monday when the jury in the case of the Earl of Galloway, charged with indecent behavior towards girls of tender years, brought in their verdict of acquittal, was one rarely witnessed in criminal courts in this country. The guilt of the accused seemed so clearly established, even by such evidence as was allowed to filter through the objections of six eminent counsel for the defence, that those present in the court room, many of whom were friends and relatives of the little girls whom the aged nobleman was charged with abusing, took no pains to conceal their disgust with the verdict. The announcement of the verdict was the signal for loud expressions of disapproval from the benches where the spectators were seated, and the frowns and threats of the presiding judge were of no avail to suppress the cries of "Shame!" "Shame," uttered by dozens of indignant persons. In London the news of the verdict was received with great indignation among the common people, and it is pointed out that had the accused been anything but a great a great nobleman the evidence brought out would have been sufficient to convict him a dozen times over.

THE RIPPER AGAIN WRITES.

London, Oct. 13.—The secretary of the Whitechapel vigilance committee has received a letter signed "Jack the Ripper," which reads as follows

"Whitechapel, Oct. 9, 1889.—Dear Boss: I write you these few lines to let you know, as you are the boss of this vigilance committee, that the last job was not me. You might have known it was not me, for I would not have made such a botch of it. Never mind, young man, you can keep your gumps open from the 18th of October. I am on the job again. There is no blood knocking about or I would let you see some. Never mind; I ok out, old man. You are a brave sort. You thought you had me once. Yours in haste, "JACK THE RIPPER."

The letter is in the same hand writing as the former one received by the governor of the police. The authorities have not the slightest clue so far, as to the mysterious assassin.

THE CHURCH IS FREE.

Rome, Oct. 15.—In his speech delivered at Palmero Scignor Crispi said: The Pope possessed perfect religious liberty, and was only restricted, and less harshly so than in other Catholic countries, from encroaching upon the sphere of national right, which is the right of reason. "Let the church, now free," he exclaimed, "not endeavor to frighten Prometheus with the thunder bolts of heaven. Our taste is to fight in the cause of reason." Referring to anarchy, the premier said it was much easier to combat. He appealed to those advanced but reasonable ideas to separate themselves from the creators of discord who were pretending to represent the ideas of Mazzini and Garibaldi.

LANDLORDS FRANTIC.

The County Council Taking Their Land for Street Improvement.

London, Oct. 15.—Great real estate owners like the Duke of Westminster are opposing with all the means in their power improvements involving destruction of ground in the heart of the city for widening some streets and piercing new thoroughfares to relieve the congested state of some of the main avenues. The traffic outlet from the Strand to Holborn will involve demolition of a line of buildings not very ornamental, to be sure, but yielding large rentals, and the owners are frantic with indignation at what they do not hesitate to call robbery. The amount of compensation in such cases is always unsatisfactory, and it is certain that the schemes for street improvements will bring upon the heads of the council a perfect avalanche of law suits.

Visitors to London, as well as residents, will hail with joy the widening of the streets, but the owners of the buildings there are much concerned at the threatening obstruction of all business while the improvements are being made, and the consequent loss to them.

THE RESTRICTION ACT.

Although our dispatches reassert that one of the duties of the next session of parliament will be the abrogation of the restriction act, and although such is fully understood in the east, and although the Mail discusses the matter as a foregone conclusion, the Colonist as yet is in the leading strings of doubt, and rises superior to the journalistic virtue of even giving publicity to the rumor under the caption of the "Ottawa liar." The Colonist, however, shall not evade the question in a manner at once so cowardly and unjournalistic. Where there is so much smoke there must be some fire; the Colonist is bound to recognize that, and as the question is important, we not only feel that we must ask the Colonist what it is going to do about it, but we must put the question also to Mr. EARLE. The subject of Chinese immigration has become hackneyed. We dislike to advert to it. We are, however, so profoundly impressed of its evil significance as affecting the destiny of this province, that we cannot pass it by on the score of its antiquity as a feature of discussion. Possibly we should regard the rumors which are afloat with respect to the repeal of the act as unworthy of serious consideration, if the local mouthpiece of the government had not studiously and with an ingenuity worthy of a better cause sought to pooh-pooh the matter as a bugbear. Its silence, however, taken in connection with the evasion of the subject by other government organs in the province, instead of detracting from the probability of the rumor, simply go to confirm it, points to the way the wind is blowing, and indicates unmistakably that they are in touch with Mr. DEWDNEY's banquet speech. This means, if it means anything, that the modi- been in contemplation for some time. It means also, if it means fication of the Restriction Act has anything, that the Tory leaders in this province were privy to it, and, further, it means, if it means anything, that these gentlemen concur; that the Colonist and heaven knows how many organs have been "fixed," and it means moreover that we shall have to class Mr. EARLE in the category along with them unless he unbosoms himself. The more we think of the manner which gave rise to the question, by which we mean the irrelevant manner in which Mr. DEWDNEY introduced it, and the equivocal clap trap of the Colonist which followed, the more are we made to perceive the importance the Dominion government attaches to it as the precursor of a bitter struggle, a struggle which will obliterate old political lines, and develop new men in the political arena who will fiercely combat the conservation of colonial interests to the welfare of Imperialism. It is the same old story over again, England using the colonies to rake the chestnuts out of the fire, and as usual the colonies affording their quota of politicians who are willing to be the instruments. In the matter of the Chinese themselves, we entertain for them no feelings of personal hostility. We will even go so far as to say that in a limited sense they are a disideratum. We cannot, however, regard their unrestricted influx to these shores with feelings of other than apprehension, for it does not admit of argument, that we should adopt a policy toward unassimilative aliens, which if they fully take advantage, of must prove detrimental to self interest, and in fact so encroach upon native labor as to raise the question of self preservation. The philosophy of the universal brotherhood of man is beautiful in theory, but it will not always work in practice. Necessity will not be governed by the creed of philanthropists who never missed a meal in their lives. We take no stock in a philanthropy which requires a man to cut his own throat that another may live, and particularly when we know that the other party is not prepared to make a like sacrifice. The nation which puts forth all of its energies to merely live soon retrogrades. The influx of Chinese in this Province means the exodus of the native population to the States. The working population will naturally gravitate to where they can do the best, and in the absence of this class business will suffer. The business men of this province want to take the question of the abrogation of the Restriction Act seriously into consideration. They want to bear in mind that whether it be here or in England only a few speculators and capitalists are interested in the continuance of friendly relations with the Chinese empire, and they also want to bear in mind that commercial China will not decline to trade because we refuse a refuge to their pauper countrymen. The threat of retaliation and refusal to trade is rank nonsense, although, suppose it to be the reverse, must we suffer that English speculators may continue to roll up wealth?

ANNEXATION OF HAWAII.

Although the republican papers in the States ridicule the idea of the annexation of Hawaii as a "fake" of the Examiner's, there is probably some truth in it nevertheless. The Hawaiians are slowly but surely succumbing to the superior civilization of the combined English and American residents, and the question of annexation is the most natural thing in the world. The idea also is further prompted by the immense sugar interests of a California syndicate, of which CLAUS SPRECKELS is the head and soul, and doubtless too the Samoan difficulty has contributed to the settlement of the belief among American politicians that if there is going to be constant wrangling over the autonomy of the South Pacific islands, the easiest way out of the difficulty is to compass the annexation of some of them. It is not unlikely, therefore, that the Examiners "fake" has a substratum of reality, and that unless the annexation should require force of arms, a method of persuasion the Americans are not prepared to endorse, it is almost sure to take place. But the question arises, will there not be a European protest. Unquestionably. We do not imagine, however, if the annexation of Hawaii can be accomplished with the free consent of the Hawaiians that European remonstrance will influence Americans to refrain from the absorption of the coveted territory. The Americans have grown somewhat arrogant of late years, and cognizant as they are of the state of Europe remonstrance from that quarter will scarcely operate to restrain their acquisitiveness. Nothing is more certain than that BISMARCK would have resisted American interference in the Samoan affair had his hands been free at home. The Germans are not in the habit of being dictated to, right or wrong, if they can help it, and least of all can they stomach being bullied by democracy. The quick and satisfactory solution of the Samoan affair so far as the United States was concerned was owing to BISMARCK's having too many irons in the fire. As to what England would do in the matter that is problematical, but it is no less true of her than of Germany that she is handicapped by European complications. We do not see therefore that the Americans would regard European remonstrance with much apprehension. So far as the Hawaiians themselves are concerned it cannot make much difference to them what flag they live under. Enervated and broken down in great part by vicious habits contracted by contact with foreigners, their independence is a farce. The best thing that could happen Hawaii would be for it to fall under the sway of American or English occupancy, provided, of course, such a consummation may be reached without bloodshed and without straining the relations of the only two powers fit to rule—England and America.

A CURIOUS LIBEL SUIT.

Mr. JAMES BRYCE, an English historian, and one who, according to American critics, has more than done justice to American institutions, has had a libel suit instituted against him by OAKEY HALL, ex-mayor of New York. The alleged libel lies in Mr. BRYCE's mention of Mr. HALL in connection with certain historical events of about twenty years ago, the consideration of which was peculiarly necessary in such a work as Mr. BRYCE was engaged upon. To the ordinary reader there certainly is no suggestion of malice in reference to Mr. HALL, and nothing indicating a desire to injure that gentleman's present status in life. Mr. HALL, however, feels himself wronged and he asks £20,000 damages. The New York World commenting on the case, asks if the historian who treats of events twenty years old made careful inquiry to ascertain whether anybody whose name is linked with them may perchance survive? Must he keep a detective bureau at his elbow and a legal adviser "on tap" for safety? And if the grave historical and political writer is thus hedged about with personal reponsibility what are the limitations of that responsibility? How remote must events be in order that their discussion shall be privileged? May one freely express the opinion that CICERO was corrupt, or that the late CALIGULA was a person of vicious impulses? THOMAS JEFFERSON, the father of the democracy in the States, Mr. BRYCE characterizes an anarchist. THOMAS JEFFERSON is dead but the libel laws of New York on its criminal side applies as well to defunct persons as to the living. If therefore any of Mr. JEFFERSON's surviving relatives or friends are of the opinion that he has been libelled, the distinguished English author, the first the Americans say who has done justice to their institutions, may be criminally prosecuted the next time he visits New York. The World concludes that if Mr. HALL's suit is successful, it may render necessary some judicial decision on these points, as it is apparent that historians and political writers must be given latitude in the discussion of events and personages.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Columbian discusses the application to the Privy Council by the C. P. R. for permission to construct a bridge across the Fraser, and although it does not like to say so plainly, it evidently feels like asking, just what business the provincial secretary had to meddle in the matter and how his opinion, that an eighty-foot span was sufficient, came to be of any value? Also did he give as JOHN ROSSON's opinion or is it the opinion of the government.

A number of the government organs in the east asserted that the United States displayed hostility to reciprocal trade with the Dominion by neglecting to invite Canada to send delegates to the international congress in Washington. The true reason, however, why Canadian delegates were not asked is found in a letter from Senator JOHN SHERMAN to a gentleman in Ottawa. The Senator says:—I think there is no doubt that the presence of delegates from the Dominion of Canada at the proposed conference of American States would be very acceptable and proper, but I do not see how it can be done except with the consent or appointment of Great Britain. Our government could not with due respect to Great Britain, hold any formal political relations with the Dominion government, a necessary result of the dependence of Canada upon Great Britain, but which no doubt could be waived by the parent government.

CITY AND PROVINCE.

—It would be a gross injustice to confound that standard healing agent Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil—with the ordinary unguents, lotions and salves. They are oftentimes inflammatory and astringent. This oil is, on the contrary, eminently cooling and soothing when applied externally to relieve pain, and powerfully re-medial when swallowed.

—Mrs. E. H. Perkins, Creek Centre, Warren county, N. Y., writes: "She has been troubled with asthma for four years, had to sit up night after night with it. She has taken two bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and is perfectly cured. She strongly recommends it, and wishes to act as agent among her neighbors."

A WILD RIDE.

"It can't be done!"

"We'd be caught!"

"I'll tell you how," and the third speaker, who stood facing his two companions, boys of about his own age, stepped a little nearer as he spoke.

He was a bright, alert boy of 16, Harry Denton by name, the only son of a trusted engineer on the W. and A. railroad. A born mechanic and mathematician, he was easily the best scholar in our school, while his open, generous nature and fearlessness made him the leader of the village boys.

His companions were Willis Balyn, a quiet, studious boy, the only child of a widow whose slender income barely sufficed to provide for the two, and, with careful management to give the boy such an education as she wished him to have.

The last of the trio, and the narrator of this escapade, was called "Ned" Haviland. His special attributes were a love for mechanics and an aptitude for getting into scrapes.

It was the evening of Fast day, 1868, a time when that day meant far more than it does in these times of peace. A Sunday quiet was upon the busy village, and only the music of the church bells could be heard where we boys stood.

Before the civil war began, Steventon was as dull a place as could be found in New England, save for the small repair shops of the W. and A. railroad, which were located at that place, as it was midway between the termini. There were excellent water privileges, but the water power of Mill river was utilized by but one small concern, a woolen mill that stood close to the railroad shops.

The war changed all this. The railroad became a great transportation line, and the rolling stock and machine shops were more than trebled within two years. A new company bought the mill, added buildings of brick and stone, and began the manufacture of army cloth.

Its contract necessitated running the mills night and day, and a speedy innovation of the progressive management was a small gas works attached to the mills. As the railroad repair shops were often forced to run over time, arrangements were made to supply them with gas from the mill plant. At this time many roads lighted their passenger cars with gas, which was stored in iron reservoirs beneath the cars. In the station platform were pits furnished with hose for filling these holders.

At Steventon the road curves slightly to the south, and at this point a branch running northwest connects the main line with another village about eight miles up the river. Near its intersection with the W. and A. road this branch crosses the tail race from the mill and then the river.

An ingenious mechanic in the railroad machine shops had built for the directors a dispatch car propelled by a gas engine. It resembled an ordinary platform car, was about eighteen feet in length, and geared to one of its journals was an adaptation of the Lenoir gas motor. In this engine a mixture of gas and atmospheric air is admitted to each side of the piston head alternately, and the compound exploded at the right moment by an electric spark from a Ruhmkorff coil. A two bar railing of gas pipe surrounded the platform, with an opening on one side for ingress and egress. Near one end, over the forward or driving wheels, were the throttle and reversing levers. The brake was a steel collar, surrounding a cylinder on the main journal, and by means of a screw could be tightened by turning an ordinary brake wheel.

The car, though unfinished as yet, had made several trial trips and had worked perfectly, though the builder was not yet quite satisfied with some of its features.

Now the proposition which had so startled Willis and me was that we get this car out, fill its gas holder, and take a ride up the branch. Harry had been on it several times and knew that he could handle it.

"Tell you how," he said, "and no one will be caught, either. My key unlocks the shed where it is kept. We will lay strips of board on the rails so the wheels will make no sound, fill the holder, push the car up the branch line to the bridge, and away we go! We can easily get back before the special, with the two regiments for Greenville, is due here."

Our objections were quickly overruled, and with one eye upon the watchman's lantern, which occasionally shone here and there, as that official went his rounds in the railroad yard, we proceeded to carry out our plan. All went smoothly, and in fifteen minutes we had filled the holder, pushed the car to the trestle over the race, and were ready to set out.

We took our places on the platform, and when the watchman's lantern again disappeared, Harry opened the throttle. The steady but almost noiseless beat of the engine followed, and we moved smoothly forward across the trestle spanning the race, along the embankment beyond, and then over the trestle that crosses Mill river. Two miles further we passed a culvert, and, about the same distance beyond, a bridge over the highway. After crossing this Harry closed the valve, and allowed the car to come to a standstill.

"Now for a spin back," he said, and quickly reversing the engine, he opened the throttle again. There was a peculiar jumping motion as we started, and Harry in some way lost his balance, fell forward and sideways, and, carrying the lever down with him, opened the valve to its fullest capacity.

There was a sudden lurching forward of the car, and in a moment the tremendous speed of the engine, added to the force of gravitation—for it was down grade now—sent us forward like an arrow. The air seemed to hiss past us, so great was our speed.

Harry regained his feet at once, and called to me, "Ned, the lever is bent over the guide rods. Help me straighten it."

But our efforts were useless. We only bent it in another place, while the united strength of all three could not shut the valve.

"The brake, Ned," said Harry, and catching the wheel I gave it a quick turn. Even as I an swhose loosely, it spun around, Harry exclaimed: "No use. The collar is on Allen's bench. I saw it there this morning. We are in for it, boys!"

We were. Even while we had been making the discovery we had reached the high embankment near the river. A moment more and there was a Rur-r-r-r! as we sped over the trestle. A brief interval, scarcely noticeable, and a shorter Rur-r-r! sounded. The next instant Steventon station and shops were before us, and on the platform, with lantern held above his head, stood the watchman.

We had thrown ourselves flat upon the floor, forward, before crossing the bridges. The car swung round the curve in safety, gained the main line, and sped on toward the next station of Hanfield, a town of some importance twelve miles below.

Willis had not spoken since our mishap; he now asked, in a voice so changed that I would never have known it, "Don't you think the watchman will telegraph them to sidetrack us at Hanfield or do something for us?"

"He can't," said Harry. "Even if he could find our operator, the Hanfield office is closed. Don't worry, boys," he added coolly; "we're all right if our engine only runs down before the special meets us."

Oddly enough, I had forgotten the special train which was to bring twenty-two hundred recruits up to the camp at Fairview, and as Harry spoke a chill crept over me and a horrible buzzing filled my ears, and then every sense was strained to catch some sign of the dreaded train.

Still our speed was undiminished. We sped through cuts and over bridges; past barns and patches of woodland; through fields and past quiet farm houses. On, on, on.

"Hark!" called Harry, involuntarily, for we could not be more quiet or alert, and then to our ears was borne the sound of a distant whistle.

The special was coming!

Again the whistle sounded, nearer than before, and to me it seemed like a human shriek.

In another moment we caught sight of a white light high above the track. The Central road crossed us here at grade, and this was the signal to the special train that our line was open. And then to the left of the track we discerned a lantern borne by a man who seemed to be running toward us. But these sights were forgotten in an instant as the glare of a locomotive headlight burst full upon us, lighting the rails ahead until they seemed like bars of fire.

What my feelings were I cannot tell; I only know that I was powerless to move hand or foot. I could only watch the flaming meteor that neared us so rapidly.

All at once I saw a lantern swung aloft at our left, and the man who held it shouted something I could not make out. Then, at the very moment that we seemed about to crash into the hissing monster before us, our car swerved violently to the left, while the two locomotives and the long train of cars thundered by on the other side.

A short distance we ran with rapidly slackening speed, then left the rails, and, plunging into the sand, stopped short. I rolled off under the railing, and knew nothing more until a man raised me to my feet and asked if I was hurt.

I soon recovered sufficiently to walk to the station, whither Harry had preceded me, while poor Willis, who lay as one dead, was carried to the house of a physician near by.

There was not a little excitement over our escapade, but it died away finally, with no prosecutions.

It came out that the watchman at Steventon had rightly guessed the trouble when we sped by him, and had succeeded in getting a telegram to Hanfield just in time to save us. To stop the special was of no use, even if they could do so in time, which was doubtful, as it was in sight when the message was received.

So a man was sent to shift us to a side track if possible, and this he succeeded in doing, running us upon an uphill spur which led to a sand bank excavated by the road.

It was a long time before Willis could be brought home, so great was the shock to his nervous system. He never fully recovered, and died before he had reached his twenty-third birthday.

Harry suffered in no way from the horrors of that night, and is now a well known inventor and builder in the great west.

As for myself, it was long before I could hear a locomotive whistle without a nervous tremor. And even now, after the lapse of a quarter of a century, I sometimes awaken at night with a start, for in my dream I have seen a locomotive head light glaring at me in menace—coming on swiftly as if to crush me to death. My nerves still cherish the memory of that hideous adventure.—Edwin L. Johnson in The Youth's Companion.

The Chinese Have No Nerves.

An English physician, residing in China, points out that the most characteristic difference between the Chinaman and the Caucasian of Europe lies in the former's lack of nervousness. We in America, who have seen the Chinaman working incessantly in his little laundry, shall find no difficulty in believing the statements of the English physician when he says: "The Chinaman can write all day, he can work all day, he can stand for a whole day in one position, weaving, hammering gold or cutting ivory, without once being attacked by nervousness. This peculiarity makes itself apparent in early youth. The Chinaman can bear any kind of bodily exercise. Sport and play are to him unnecessary labor. He can sleep anywhere and in any position—amid thundering machines, deafening noises, the cry of children or the wrangle of grown people; on the ground, in bed or on a chair." In his own innocent way the Chinaman is almost a Sybarite.—New York News.

A Theory on Animal Showers.

There is one case, related in the "Book of Days," of a colony of rats, while migrating in vast numbers from the high to the low countries of Norway having been overtaken by a whirlwind, in which they were caught up and carried to a neighboring valley, where the astonished and perhaps terrified inhabitants were treated to a veritable rat shower. It has been suggested that the frogs which have fallen in this manner may have been really hatched in the air—the eggs having been drawn up into the atmosphere by the action of a waterspout and held in suspension with aqueous particles long enough to hatch them out and give them perfect form, afterward returning to the earth with the rain drops in accordance with the law of attraction of gravitation. It is, at all events, quite certain that other things besides vapor are oftentimes translated from earth to atmosphere by certain well known and accredited developments of natural laws.

No Further Need of the Lamp.

Over beyond Kate's mountain the colored brethren were holding a series of "shouting services" in a little meeting house with one big lamp. Late one evening a big youth got up to "fess his sins." He made the frankest and fullest confession of the series. He owned up to every crime in the calendar and every sin in the decalogue. He kept on and on with a florid fluency which roused his hearers almost to the hysterical point. Suddenly a voice from the rear broke in: "Put out dat lamp." "Why for?" demanded the presiding clergyman excitedly. "Kase the vilest sinner done return," said the voice. And there the confessor collapsed.—Philadelphia Record.

Wanted a Man.

A new story about Washington is told in Mr. Lodge's new volume, on the authority of Marshall. He had sent out an officer to cross a river for information on which the next day's march would depend. The officer was long absent, and returned without the intelligence, saying that the night was dark and stormy, the river full of ice, and that he could not get across. "Washington glared at him a moment, seized a large leaden inkstand from the table, hurled it at the offender's head, and said, with a fierce oath, 'Be off, and send me a man!' The officer went, crossed the river and brought back the information."

Private Theatres.

It is quite the rage to have theatres in private houses in England. Among the most conspicuous is that in Hubert Herkomer's London house. Another is at the country seat of Sir Percy Shelley, son of the poet. Sir Percy writes plays, paints scenery, and composes the incidental music of the plays produced. William Morris' private theatre in London is more of a hall. It is long, low, barren and whitewashed—not at all what one would expect of a decorative artist. On the stage of this theatre, the poet painter, in blue flannel shirt and disheveled hair gives forth his socialistic doctrines to audiences of laboring men.

The pursuit of politics as a profession offers a fairly good career in France. A deputy receives, first of all, a salary of nearly $2,000. Then he travels at the expense of his country, and enjoys many other privileges among which, perhaps, not the least highly considered is free admission to those theatres which are under the partial control of the state. It is therefore not surprising that the number of candidates who offer themselves for nomination is occasionally embarrassing, and as according to French laws a successful candidate must have an absolute majority of the entire number of votes cast there are frequently a large number of constituencies where it is necessary to have a second ballot. This is the case this year, but it is not expected that the elections which are yet to take place on Oct. 5th, will materially alter the balance of parties as fixed by the elections of last Sunday. The republicans have gained somewhat in numbers; but their principal strength lies in the fact that the appeal to the people, so long the threatening weapon brandished before them by the reactionaries, has taken place, and they have been upheld and granted a fresh lease of power.

Boulanger has been returned by an immense majority in Montmartre, one of the Paris districts. Paris indeed is the

VANCOUVER POLICE CHARGES.

Continuation of the Enquiry by Mr. Justice Drake.

On Monday the enquiry into the charges of fraud preferred against members of the Vancouver police force was at it in session. The counsel for the defence of Chief Stewart asked for an adjournment for a week, but his lordship refused to grant it. He agreed, however, to take up the charges against officer Fife, leaving the argument for defence of the chief to stand over until the charges against officer Fife had been heard.

Two keepers of Chinese houses of ill-fame were called who deposed that they had paid sums ranging from $5 to $8 per month to officer Fife, for which they received immunity from arrest.

Officer Fife was then put on oath, and denied the charges in toto. Officer Haywood was also called for the defence. The case was then adjourned until Tuesday.

Its Excellent Qualities

Commend to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

Wedding Favors.

THE TIMES acknowledges with thanks wedding favors from Mr. and Mrs. Jos. H. Tbain.

The Nesbitt Property.

Mr. M. H. Cowan yesterday sold the Nesbitt property, on Fort Street, for $18,000. It was purchased about six months ago for $12,000.

New Westminster Real Estate.

Messrs. Richards, Haywood and Mackintosh yesterday sold the Lanbaum property on Columbia and Front streets, New Westminster city, for the sum of $20,000.

No Saloon Vote for John L.

Sullivan may as well dismiss all idea of capturing the liquor vote of Boston. The saloons cannot afford to lose their best customers during the long congressional sessions.

Inter-Provincial Exhibition.

Mayor Oppenheimer, of Vancouver, has called a meeting of those interested, to be held on the 17th inst., to discuss the advisability of an inter-provincial exhibition to be held in the year 1891.

Fast Mail Express.

The latest burst of enterprise comes also from the Canadian Pacific railway. It is now stated that the company will run a special express with the China and Japan mail, traversing the distance between the Pacific and the Atlantic in four days. No passengers will be carried.

Effects Felt Here.

As a result of the great strike of dock laborers in London, the new Merryweather steam fire engine for the fire department was not shipped up to Sept. 27th, although ready for shipment ten days previous to that date. As the accumulated freight was begun to be handled shortly after the former date it is thought it is now on the way.

Kenning-Gibbs.

At the home of the bride's parents, Work Estate, the marriage of Mr. A. Kenning, in the employ of the Ames Holden Co., and Miss Kate Gibbs, was solemnized last evening, the Rev. J. E. Starr performing the ceremony. The wedding was a quiet one and attended only by immediate relatives and a few friends of the parties concerned.

Vancouver's Next Mayor.

The struggle for the civic chair of Vancouver promises to be a lively one. The name of Mr. G. L. Wilson has been mentioned as a possible candidate. From the tone of the Vancouver press a change in civic officers is needed, but there are doubts as whether Mayor Oppenheimer can be ousted or not, as should he run for office he will receive a heavy vote.

Were They Stolen?

The Vancouver police arrested several Indians on Monday for being drunk at the rancherie, and in their shack was found a large bale of blankets that had never been opened since leaving the factory. It was marked on one side "C. G. & Co., Victoria," and on the other side "Charlie, New Westminster." The bale is now at the police station waiting for an owner.

St. John's Bazaar. — Mrs. Jolly's wax works will be repeated this evening at the Philharmonic Hall.

Grand Trunk Dividend.

A London special cable says: The Grand Trunk report issued to-day, after declaring a dividend of £1,145 for the half-year and 4 per cent. on guaranteed stock, congratulates the company on improvement during the past six months, from causes which will be explained at the meeting. The proportion of working expenses to gross receipts has been considerably reduced.

Mining on the Columbia.

The water has kept so high in the Columbia this summer that but little could be done at placer mining on the river bars. It must recede about six feet more to bring it to the best stage for working. There are, however, probably seventy-five Chinamen scattered along between Revelstoke and Gold Stream, doing something, but mostly waiting for the water to subside. In one or two places sluice boxes are being used. The prospect is poor and gold washers are likely to have a short season on the river bars.

Obituary.

The death is announced of Mrs. Dunckley, wife of Dr. Henry Dunckley, formerly editor of the Manchester Examiner and Times. Mrs. Dunckley died on Sunday at her residence, 55 Wimslow road, Withington. She was 71 years of age. It will be remembered that in February last she was presented, at the Manchester Reform Club, with a portrait of her husband, which had been subscribed for by many of the leading Liberals of the city. Mrs. Wm. Angus of Victoria, who is a daughter of the deceased lady, went to England two months ago in consequence of her mother's illness.

Something New in the Show Line.

A novel entertainment will be given at the Caledonian grounds, Beacon Hill, on Saturday evening. On that occasion Mr. See Kim, of Cormorant street, proposes to give a grand pyrotechnical exhibition, introducing wonderful Chinese devices which have never been seen before on the Pacific coast. The performance is so unusual that Mr. Kim says that not five Chinese out of every hundred in this city have ever seen it. The programme and particulars of the exhibition are to be published later on. If possible a first class band of music will be in attendance during the evening.

Hebrew Congregation.

The annual general meeting of the Congregation Emanu-El was held last evening and the following officers elected for the ensuing year: President, Morris Moss (re-elected); vice-president, J. Isaacs; treasurer, L. Braverman; secretary, E. J. Salmon; trustees, E. Frank, Lewis Lewis, and J. Hart.

It was unanimously resolved to try to obtain the services of a regularly ordained clergyman from one of the three Jewish colleges in England. Resolutions were also adopted to place a new fence around the Jewish cemetery; also around the synagogue on Pandora street.

Remains Discovered.

Workmen on the Johnson street sewer this morning unearthed the remains of a presumably white man, buried about 1858. The graveyard in those days was around the southwest corner of Douglas and Johnson streets. The remains found to-day had been interred in shallow ground, not more than two and a half feet from the surface, and are in the center of the street, near Porter's butcher shop. The box coffin had rotted away, and the best preserved portion of the remains is the skull, which has turned black. Mr. Porter on looking at the sight recalled to memory some incidents of this graveyard which he visited on occasions of funerals thirty years ago.

Humphrey-Smith.

The following is from the Norfolk Reformer, Simcoe, Ont., of Oct. 3: On Wednesday last, 25th, ult., at the residence of the bride's father, Miss Lilly, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Smith, was joined, for her future life, to Mr. William Humphrey, of Victoria, Vancouver Island, who spent his boyhood days in this town. At 3 p.m. the bride was supported by the arm of her father to the drawing room, where the hymeneal knot was tied by the Rev. D. S. Boyd, of Tyrrell. After the customary felicitations by their relatives, a most sumptuous banquet was partaken of. The happy bride was made the recipient of a silver tea service and many other costly gifts. Amid traditional symbols of benevolent desires from their friends the happy couple left on the evening train for western cities to spend a part of their honeymoon, after which they will return to give a parting visit to their friends before going to the gold regions of the west, where they will settle down in their Victoria home. Their relatives and friends wish them many happy years.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

A Melange of Events in the Sporting Arena.

The next gymkhana meeting will be held on Saturday, 26th Oct., in the driving park. The following will be the programme:

1. Change number race—Barebacked with bridles, competitors mount when the flag falls, ride over two hurdles to a post 150 yards distant, dismount, odds and evens change horses and ride home over two hurdles. The last horse in wins. All the odd numbers will carry a distinct mark.

2. Postillion race, once round the course.—Ride one horse and lead the other, four hurdles to be taken. Each competitor must arrive with his led horse.

3. Half-mile flat race for men belonging to Her Majesty's Service.

4. Ball and bucket race, mounted with saddle.—When the flag falls, each competitor to ride at full gallop past a post about 150 yards distant, on which will be placed a ball, which latter must be dropped into a bucket about 20 yards from post. Each competitor allowed three tries. Ties to run off.

Entry fees are $1 for each competition, and the entries will close on Thursday, 24th October, at 4 p. m. Post entries will be received on payment of an additional 50 cents.

M'INTYRE GOES SOUTH.

P. McIntyre returned from the mainland last night and left on to-day's steamer for San Francisco. Pete naturally feels a little downcast over his loss of the championship in the race with Watson, but thinks that by training in the climate he has been accustomed to, and on the best of tracks, such as they have in the bay city, he can get back to his old time speed. He has already had a long and brilliant career as a runner and has always had the confidence of his friends. If he should be more successful in the future his many friends in Victoria will be glad to hear of it.

BASEBALL IN AUSTRALIA.

Baseball is making rapid progress in Australia, and every Saturday a number of games are played. Of a match, on August 17th, between Melbourne and Geelong, which was won by the former by 25 to 14, a local paper says: "In the first inning, with two Geelong men on bases, Lockerman, who was playing third for Melbourne, caught a very high fly and put out three men as quick as wink; in fact it was done so smartly that hardly any one saw the play at first, and it so surprised the Geelong team that they did not recover themselves in time to score until the fifth innings."

SALE OF WORK.

The Ladies of the First Presbyterian Church Hold a Fair.

"There is a time for everything" and unless the writer is much mistaken this is the time for church bazaars. The good ladies of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Presbyterian, have not been behind their neighbors in collecting together a large lot of useful, yet beautiful articles, which were placed on sale this afternoon at prices which defy competition. A fancy sale was opened at 2 p.m., in the lecture room of the church, and in a short time afterwards the reporter found the ladies busily engaged in serving the numerous customers who came to buy of them. The articles, which were offered for sale, were tastefully arranged along the tables on the north and east side of the room and were in greater number than the society had ever been able to collect together before. In addition to plain sewing, there were among the fancy work a beautiful hand painted banner, a hand painted fire screen presented by Mrs. Fraser, a very pretty basket of artificial flowers, presented by Miss Semple, which told of much patient work and good taste. Also dolls, etc., in too great a variety to particularize. The ladies in charge are Mrs. McKillican, Mrs. Semple, Mrs. Templeman, Mrs. Gill, Mrs. Hart Miss Stephen, Miss Teague, Miss Tyson, Miss Semple, Mrs. Becker, Mrs. Pottinger, Mrs Munsie, Mrs. Rockett, Miss Gill, Misses Bennett, Miss Robertson and others. The sale, which is meeting with large success, will be continued during the evening. Tea will be set between the hours of seven and eight.

ST JOHN'S BAZAAR.

The bazaar held under the auspices of the Working Guild of St. John's church is proceeding to-day and is meeting with large success. It will be continued this evening when the wax works exhibition will be repeated and a promenade concert will take place, at which local amateurs will appear. Any articles remaining unsold this evening will be auctioned off in the room before the bazaar closes.

Choral Society.

The choral society will meet for practice this evening at 8 o'clock. Every member is requested to attend and help the society along, and also bring any friends who are desirous of forwarding the musical interests of the city and the society.

For the South.

The Umatilla sailed at one o'clock this afternoon for San Francisco with the following passengers from this port: Joseph H. Twain and wife, D. L. Poggio and wife, R. Stanley Begg, Mrs. McGill and child, W E Edmiston and wife, H. J. Cropp, P. Cronin, J. G. Walsh and J. McRoberts.

Shareholders' Meeting.

Messrs. Bourchier & Higgins have kindly offered the use of their offices to the shareholders of the National Electric Tramway Co., who will meet on Friday evening to discuss the advisability of changing the line of the rails to Victoria West instead of out to the Jubilee Hospital.

Non-Union Moulders.

Several non-union moulders came down from Vancouver last night to take positions at the Albion Iron Works foundry made vacant by the strike of union men. The strikers will soon leave here, as they can get plenty of work across the Sound. It will be with difficulty that the vacancies can all be filled, as good non-union men are scarce.

Poggio-Neville.

At St. Andrew's pro-Cathedral, at 9 o'clock this morning D. L. Poggio, of New York, and Miss. Belle Neville, of this city, were united in marriage by the Rev. Father Laterme. The groom was supported by Mr. Geo. H. Shade, while Miss Mary O'Brien officiated as bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Poggio left for San Francisco to-day and will return in the spring.

The Artesian Wells.

Mr. Hugh Ross, of Petrolia, Ont., says the Kootenay Star, who has had large experience in well-boring for oil, was this season employed by the government to conduct its experiment in boring for an artesian well at the ranch of Hon. G. B. Martin, near Shuswap. The machinery arrived from the east a short time ago, but it was found that a very necessary piece was broken in transportation, and so much time would be required to replace it that the government decided not to go on with the work this year.

A Meeting Proposed.

It is understood that a public meeting will be called in a few days to discuss the policy of the Dominion Government toward Victoria, as foreshadowed in the speech lately delivered by the Hon. Edgar Dewdney in this city, at which meeting the Chinese Restriction Act, the calling of the China steamers, the Canada Western Railway, and other questions mooted by Mr. Dewdney's speech, will be thrashed out. No doubt Mr. Earle will be invited to be present.

A Strange Discovery.

While cutting up a log in the Brunette saw mills, New Westminster, which had been brought from the Squamish river, in the Howe Sound country, the saw came in rather violent contact with a shot shell of about two inches in diameter. The shell had been buried over seven inches in the timber, and apparently had been there for centuries. The hole which must have been made by the entrance of the shot had quite grown over. Several teeth were broken out of the saw and the shell was thrown with considerable force among the mill hands, striking one of the men, but not in such a manner as to prove fatal.

Tramway Notes.

The contractor for laying the rails of the electric tramway intends to break ground on Monday next. About two hundred men will be employed.

The rails for the work have been heard from lately. At last advices they were at Donald and are expected here any day. It was at first intended to have the rails brought by sea, but it was decided it would take too long, and favorable arrangements being made, the iron was shipped overland.

Work at the power house is going on fast. The two boilers are in place, and the engine and shafting will be up by the end of next week. The directors are confident of having the line in operation by the first of December.

Thain-Gowen.

The large gathering at St. John's church this morning was proof of the popularity of the two parties who were to be joined in the bonds of wedlock. Before the hour of eleven the building was filled with friends of both bride and groom. All were expectantly waiting, and at precisely the hour of eleven the bride, leaning on her father's arm, entered the church and advanced to the altar rail. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss P. Gowen, and Miss M. Thain, and three little nieces, the Misses Gowen and Reveley, who were all dressed in purest white and bearing baskets of flowers. The bride was elegantly attired in white satin with train and veil, and a delicate wreath of orange blossoms adorning her brow. At the altar the party was met by the Rev. C. Jeune, the groom and his supporters, Mr. A. Gowen and Mr. A. Langley. Mrs. Lombard, who presided at the organ, played the "Wedding March," and after the ceremony had been performed and the register signed, the bells pealed forth a merry chime, the wedded pair leaving the church, preceded by the little bridesmaids, daughters of C. N. Gowen and Captain F. Reveley, who strewed flowers in the path of the happy couple. The rice and old shoes thrown after the newly married couple were in quantities sufficient to ensure years of good luck and prosperity. The bride was presented at the church door with a beautiful bouquet by Mrs. J. Anderson. After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the residence of the bride's father, where a bounteous wedding breakfast was partaken of. Followed by the best wishes of their host's of friends the happy couple enter their new life, and among those friends THE TIMES wishes to number itself. Mr. and Mrs. Thain left on to-day's steamer for San Francisco to spend their honeymoon.

TRAMWAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—At the meeting of the Electric Tramway Co., to be held at the company's office to-morrow afternoon, some most important business will be brought before the meeting, and every shareholder should deem it of vital interest to be on hand as the directors are most anxious that any changes made in the routes already decided upon, should be endorsed by the shareholders. We understand that the change spoken of is to abandon for the present the line running from the head of Fort street to the Richmond Road, and instead of this extend the line over the Rock Bay bridge into Victoria West. The reason for the change is, that there is no traffic whatever in the direction of the Richmond Road, and the new route into Victoria West promises a large traffic, which by giving a thought to the subject every shareholder will see the point and should make it his business to be on hand at this meeting and see that the proposed change is made.
